The Ruth Ke`elikolani building is currently closed to the public. The Hawai'i Civil Rights Commission office continues to operate and provide services, without in-person contact. You can reach the HCRC by phone, fax, email, or regular mail.

Due to the pandemic, the Ruth Ke`elikolani building at 830 Punchbowl Street remains closed to the public.

HCRC is open and can conduct intakes, accept complaint filings and effect service of complaints, and conduct investigations, while maintaining social distancing requirements during the COVID-19 pandemic. These services will be provided via telephone, fax and e-mail. No in-person public contact will occur.

For information or case-related inquiry, call (808) 586-8636 between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., or send an email to DLIR.HCRC.INFOR@hawaii.gov. An HCRC staff member will answer or respond.

Pre-complaint questionnaires (PCQs) and instructions on how to file a complaint are available online at <http://labor.hawaii.gov/hcrc/forms/>.

Submissions of PCQs and other documents can be sent via FAX (808) 586-8655, or USPS mail to Hawai'i Civil Rights Commission, 830 Punchbowl Street, Room 411, Honolulu, HI 96813.
